There are many things in our society that need to be changed today. In my opinion, an ideology that needs to be practiced more is the acceptance and understanding of different opinions. One of the biggest problems that we face is conflict. Much of this conflict stems from not listening to any other opinions but our own and not accepting different ideas. I feel that if everyone stopped the practice of ethnocentrism and instead practiced cultural relativism, this could solve many problems that our society faces today. Personally, I have been guilty of having ethnocentrism practices in my lifetime. Recently, I have been more open minded and have listened to others' opinions instead of dismissing them. This has resolved many conflicts that I have faced, and if this were practiced more often, I genuinely believe this could do the best in improving our society.
